Brief Introduction:

GHRP 6 is a compound with a unique chain of six amino acids that effectively promotes the release of growth hormone secretions and gives the body feedback. GHRP 6 also blocks somatostatin, a hormone primarily responsible for blocking the release of HGH secretions.

The main use of GHRP-6 is to promote food consumption by triggering hunger and improving energy metabolism in humans. The compound is also widely used to treat growth hormone deficiencies and other complications such as obesity and eating disorders.

GHRP-6 directly stimulates the anterior pituitary and subsequently leads to increased growth hormone release in the body. Since GHRP-6 directly affects the feedback loop and triggers changes that inhibit the release of growth hormone, it can be used to restore natural secretion of growth hormone if naturally secreted growth hormone levels have been inhibited due to long-term use of synthetic growth hormone.
