Brief Introduction:

Tianeptine is a prescription medication used to treat depression in all its ranges of severity. The tianeptine medication is generally described as a tricyclic antidepressant. This is a chemical compound so named because it contains three rings of atoms. Like other tricyclic antidepressants, tianeptine blocks the reuptake, or re-absorption, of serotonin. This is a neurotransmitter responsible for one's sense of well-being. The reuptake consequently increases the availability of such substances to the brain.
