Brief Introduction:

Noopept, N-phenylacetyl-L-prolylglycine ethyl ester, is a synthetic nootropic molecule. It has a similar effect to piracetam, in that it provides a mild cognitive boost after supplementation. Noopept also provides a subtle psychostimulatory effect.

Noopept has a much lower standard dose than piracetam, and it provides a general neuroprotective effect after supplementation. This neuroprotective effect occurs during various states of cognitive trauma, including oxidative stress and physical trauma.

Application:

Fasoracetam, also known by its scientific name (5R)-5-(piperidine-1-carbonyl) pyrrolidin-2-one (which probably doesn't roll off the tongue as well), is a powerful new nootropic that falls within the subclass of nootropics known as racetams. If you are familiar with nootropics, then you likely know that all racetams are derivatives of piracetam, the original nootropic. Many of these derivatives are more powerful and affect cognition in different ways than piracetam. Fasoracetam is a good example of a piracetam derivative that is stronger than piracetam.

Function:

1. Noopept can increase coordination;
2. Noopept can improve mood;
3. Noopept can help fight fatigue;

4. Noopept can prevent oxidation within the brain;
5. Noopept can treat alcohol related brain damage;
6. Noopept can prevent withdrawal symptoms.
