Brief Introduction of Hexarelin 2mg

Peptide Hexarelin (also known as Examorelin) is a potent Growth hormone secretagogue (GHS), Ghrelin mimetic and agonist of the Growth hormone secretagogue receptors (GHSR). Hexarelin belongs to the Growth hormone-releasing peptides (GHRPs) family, a group of small synthetic peptides that stimulate the growth hormone secretion by the pituitary gland, and like other Ghrelin mimetics, act through own specific (Ghrelin) receptor – GHSR, independent from GHRHR (Growth-hormone-releasing hormone receptor).

Hexarelin substantially and dose-dependently increases plasma levels of growth hormone (GH) in both, animals and humans. Hexarelin does not affect plasma levels of glucose, luteinizing hormone (LH), follicle-stimulating hormone (FSH), or thyroid-stimulating hormone (TSH), however similarly to GHRP-2 and GHRP-6 peptides, it slightly and dose-dependently stimulates the release of prolactin, adrenocorticotrophic hormone (ACTH), and cortisol in humans.
