Brief Introduction of Sermorelin Peptide

Sermorelin is a Growth Hormone Releasing Hormone. Under the trade name of GEREFF, it was FDA approved as a treatment for growth hormone deficiency and as a diagnostic agent to evaluate the pituitary's ability to secrete growth hormone.

Sermorelin stimulates the pituitary to make more natural growth hormone by increasing the number of cells that secrete growth hormone in the pituitary and by increasing the amount secreted per cell. It is injected subcutaneously usually at night when your body is naturally releasing growth hormone. Sermorelin has a half-life of under 15 minutes. This means that it is quickly metabolized and that there is a one pass effect on your pituitary.

Sermorelin is administered subcutaneously an hour before bedtime. To maximize its effect, it is advised to avoid fats and carbohydrates 30 minutes on each side of dosing. This dietary restriction can become an issue for someone dosing more frequently.

It may take up to three months of continuous use of Sermorelin for a patient's pituitary to ramp up to its maximum output of natural growth hormone. If Sermorelin use is discontinued, the pituitary will gradually ramp down its production of natural growth hormone unlike the crash that can happen when stopping exogenous growth hormone.
