Brief Introduction of gh Frag 176-191

Fragment (176/191) is a fat loss peptide derived from the GH molecule, which directly initiates lipolysis and inhibits lipogenesis, but in order to better understand this peptide, it is imperative to have at least a rudimentary understanding of its parent hormone.

This fragment is a modified form of amino acids 176-191 at the c-terminal region of the gh. Studies have shown that it works by mimicking the way of natural gh regulates fat metabolism but without the adverse effects on insulin sensitivity (blood sugar) or cell proliferation (muscle growth) that seen with unmodified. This HG fragment 176-191 stimulates lipolysis (breaking down of fat) and inhibits lipogenesis (the formation of fatty acids and other lipids in the body).

The portion of the molecule responsible for these effects is amino acids 176/191. In every sense, Frag should primarily be considered a fat loss peptide which performs these functions through the same pathways as traditional GH, but without exposing the user to the potentially undesirable side effects which may present themselves during GH administration.

Fragment 176-191 has been heavily researched in animal models because even while it preserves the fat-burning effects of GH, it avoids some other effects of its parent protein such as increasing insulin-like growth factor-1 (IGF-1) levels, negatively impacting carbohydrate metabolism, altering insulin sensitivity, increasing long bone growth, and so forth.
