What Is AOD-9604

AOD 9604 is a synthetic analog of the human growth hormone developed to combat obesity and help people lose weight. AOD stimulates the pituitary gland similar to HGH and other growth hormones to speed up the metabolism and increase weight loss in a shorter period of time than just diet and exercise alone. Users may start to notice results in as little as two months. Results will be contingent upon factors such as working out regularly and following a dietary plan.

Description:

AOD 9604 is a synthetic analog of the lipolytic domain of human GH. It is not a GHRH (growth hormone releasing hormone) like Modified GRF 1-29, and it is not a GHRP (growth hormone releasing peptide) like GHRP-2, or GHRP-6. AOD9604 actually acts on the reduction of excessive adipose tissues such as those in the abdominal area, increase in muscle mass, and enhances the lipid content of the body. It is also known as lipotropin and Tyr-hGH fragment, and is generally available these days as a transdermal cream or an injectable.

AOD9604 is an analog of the GRF which signals the effects of GH. It is a 15-mer peptide residue of the C-terminus to which tyrosine is added at the N-terminal end. This synthetically produced hormone is very common to weightlifters and bodybuilders because of a number of physical benefits.

Fragment (176-191) is a fat-loss peptide derived from the GH molecule, which directly initiates lipolysis and inhibits lipogenesis, but in order to better understand this peptide, it is imperative to have at least a rudimentary understanding of its parent hormone.

GH is a polypeptide which contains an amino acid sequence that is 191 amino acids in length. Frag (176-191) was developed by isolating and modifying the specific portion of the GH molecule responsible for the hormone's lipolytic and anti-lipogenic effects.

The portion of the molecule responsible for these effects is amino acids 176-191. In every sense, Frag should primarily be considered a fat loss peptide which performs these functions through the same pathways as traditional GH, but without exposing the user to the potentially undesirable side effects which may present themselves during GH administration.
