Molecular Weight	848.81
Purity	>99%
Storage	-18°C
Shelf Life	2 years

What Is Delta Sleep Inducing Peptide

Delta sleep-inducing peptide, abbreviated DSIP, is a neuropeptide that when infused into the mesodiencephalic ventricle of recipient rabbits induces spindle and delta EEG activity and reduced motor activities. Its aminoacid sequence is Trp-Ala-Gly-Gly-Asp-Ala-Ser-Gly-Glu. However, the gene is unknown[citation needed], raising serious questions regarding the actual existence of this peptide in nature.

Usage

DSIP (Delta Sleep-inducing Peptide) is a neuropeptide found in the hypothalamus, pituitary, and adrenal glands.

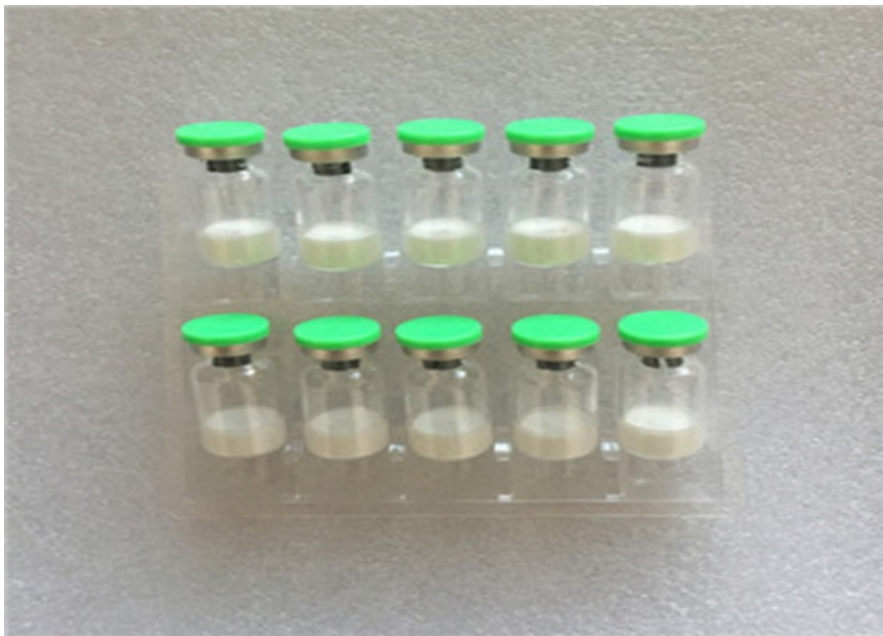

Its isolation has allowed for extensive research which has found several possible primary and peripheral roles of this peptide. First, DSIP has been shown to induce sleep.

Second, it may have benefits as an analgesic in treatment of chronic pain, sometimes as an adjunct treatment.

Third, DSIP has been shown to block ACTH release and decrease levels of ACTH, stimulate LH release, and act as an inhibitor of the secretion of somatostatin.

The source of production of DSIP is yet unknown; It may be produced in the central nervous system or in a peripheral organ. It is thought to pass through the blood-brain barrier (BBB) more easily than most known neuropeptides. As mentioned, DSIP has shown positive results in inducing slow-wave EEG (sleep). It has been shown to help treat narcolepsy and restore disturbed sleep patterns to normal sleep rhythms.

Research of Delta Sleep Inducing Peptide

- Sleep regulation
- Induced spindle and delta EEG activity
- Reduced motor activities to induce deep sleep
- Analgesic for chronic pain
- Decreased levels of ACTH
- Stimulated LH release
- Inhibits secretion of somatostatin
- Can normalize blood pressure

Package and Shipping of Delta Sleep Inducing Peptide

Package: 2mg/vial, 10vials/box, 5mg/vial, 10vials/box,
Shipping: With 3-5 days after your payment
